

Palmers Green Library Reopens

As these photos show, the new library is quite a change! These pictures give a flavour of what's there, but go along yourself to see what's on offer.

During the opening the ceremony two local poets read poems, including two with a very local flavour. Mary Schneider (left) read one about seeing an owl in Arnos Park, and Maggie Butt (second from left) about childhood in Oakfield Road. Palmers Green Councillor Bambos Charalambous probably needs no identification, and on the right is Councillor Ayfer Orhan who is currently responsible for Library Services.

The community room on the ground floor is available for hire at £10.60 an hour.

Almost hidden away at the back of the first floor is a small display cabinet with items about Broomfield Park and one just creeping out about Grovelands Park. The Broomfield House Trust is discussing putting the Broomfield House model currently in Multiyork's window in the Library to help further publicise the Council's consultation on the future of Broomfield House.
